Steevens is a young Haitian, leading a simple but stable life in Chile with a job, a house, and friends. With the arrival of his childhood friend Junios, Steeven's life is turned upside down. After being racially discriminated, Steevens reacts by physically assaulting his employer. The news about the assault goes viral and causes Steevens to be shunned by his community and the state.

The screening is followed by a discussion with Eva van Belle, a researcher from the nccr – on the move working on discrimination in the labor market and a representative of the film crew of "No Apologies". The discussion is moderated by Christina Mittmasser and Lisa Marie Borrelli.
