Abstract

The Integration Nation: Immigration and Colonial Power in Liberal Democracies (Polity Press 2022) is a manifesto for a new critical migration, mobilities and border studies, bridging established and more recent critical trends in these interconnected but sometimes divided fields. In this lecture, Adrian Favell will present key ideas from the book, in terms of what he calls “political demography”: the study of how advanced liberal nation-states classify and enumerate populations which are inherently mobile and diverse into ‘legible’ legal and institutional distinctions: of ‘citizens’ and ‘migrants’, ‘nationals’ and ‘aliens’, ‘majorities’ and ‘minorities’. They do this in order to constitute their own pastoral and governmental powers, thereby sustaining a global order of territorialized and bordered national populations founded on massive inequalities between nations and their members – inequalities that still substantially reflect the racialized hierarchies of colonialism and Empire.
