nccr on the move

Abstract

The current research projects of the nccr – on the move focus on the impact of public health, economic, political and environmental crises on migration, mobility, and immobility. This panel aims at presenting the NCCR's approach to migration, (im)mobility and crisis. The session will start by a presentation of the recently published NCCR Working Paper #37 entitled Crises, Migration and \(Im\)Mobility: Towards a Reflexive and Multilevel Approach by three of its authors. Then, three Project Leaders of the nccr – on the move will explain how their own research relates to this overarching approach, and reflect on the challenges of conducting research on the entanglement between crisis, migration and (im)mobility.
